The pursuit of the car, which was reported stolen in Powell County, started earlier in the day in Clark County before entering Fayette and Bourbon counties. The car was stopped later on Two Mile Road about a mile outside the Winchester city limits. Michael Ray Osborne of Slade was arrested and faces several charges in connection with the pursuit.

It only took an hour and a half for a suspect in several thefts to show back up in Clark County, after leading Winchester Police officers on a 120 mph pursuit into Bourbon County.

Michael Ray Osborne, 34, of Slade, was already a suspect in several theft cases in Winchester, police said, before they spotted him driving a stolen Dodge Neon Tuesday morning. Winchester Police Detective Dennis Briscoe said he and two other detectives tried to stop the car on Rockwell Road around 10 a.m.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Abramson's allowance for housing gets the ax

FRANKFORT (AP) — Lawmakers looking for ways to balance a $19 billion state budget said Tuesday they're eliminating a $30,000-a-year housing allowance for Democratic Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson, a relatively small appropriation that was first proposed by Senate Republicans.

Democratic House Speaker Greg Stumbo acquiesced, saying he sees no need for the state to continue paying the stipend since Abramson commutes from his home in Louisville.

Abramson spokeswoman Kerri Richardson had no immediate comment about the decision. Stumbo said Abramson has been mum on the issue.

"I never heard from him, and the governor didn't say anything about it, so I assume they think that's fair," Stumbo said.

Kentucky began paying a housing allowance to lieutenant governors more than a decade ago in a cost-saving move. Previously, they lived in a state-provided mansion.

A final budget deal hasn't yet been reached between negotiators for the House and Senate who

Senate committee approves prescription drug bill

FRANKFORT (AP) — A House bill to curb prescription drug abuse in Kentucky was approved Tuesday by the Senate Judiciary Committee.
The committee voted 7-2 to endorse the legislation by Speaker of the House Greg Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg, after making several changes.
One change was made because of doctors' concerns. Although the Senate substitute retains Stumbo's proposal to move the Kentucky All Schedule Prescription Electronic Reporting (KASPER) program from the Cabinet for Health and Family Services to the attorney general's office, it creates a special unit of that office and limits the number of its employees who have access to KASPER information to 20. Those employees must have specialized training.
The KASPER system would also be modified to record the identity of the searchers and record their queries.
When the House of Representatives passed the bill, 81-7, on March 9, Stumbo said that moving KASPER to the attorney general's office was a key provision because the program is "a law enforcement tool."
Sen. Tom Jensen, R-London, the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said Tuesday that's an issue he's willing to compromise.

Amish buggy legislation clears General Assembly

FRANKFORT (AP) — Moving to settle a high-profile religious issue, Kentucky's General Assembly passed a bill Tuesday that would allow the Amish to forgo a long-standing traffic regulation that they put bright orange safety triangles on their slow-moving buggies.
Several Amish farmers had served time in jail for refusing to use the vehicle emblems that they objected to on religious grounds.
They complained that the signs called attention to them, which is against their religion, and that the triangular shape represents the Trinity, which they're not allowed to display.

Sen. Ken Winters, R-Murray, said he considers final passage of the bill a victory for religious liberty.
"We've been able to accommodate a major issue in their lives," said Winters, a retired Baptist college president who represents a growing Amish community in his largely rural western Kentucky district.

The House voted 75-21 to allow the Amish to use reflective tape on the backs of their buggies rather than the orange triangles.

above 120 mph as he passed other vehicles on the shoulder, according to the arrest citation. They followed him to exit 87 and past Bluegrass Station, but lost contact with the vehicle on the two-lane road inside Bourbon County after passing Bluegrass Station and ended the pursuit for safety reasons.

“Due to the high speeds and the road conditions, we terminated the pursuit,” Winchester Police Capt. James Hall said. “We knew who the suspect was. He was wanted for questioning in another matter.”
Hall said they were planning to obtain warrants for Osborne, but they began receiving information that Osborne would be coming back to Clark County from the south.

Briscoe said officers began patrolling southern Clark County and finally spotted Osborne in the Dodge Neon on Two Mile Road around 12:30 p.m. Osborne started to flee again, but stopped and surrendered after a short distance, Briscoe said. He was arrested without further incident.
The car he was driving was reported stolen from Powell

County, Briscoe said. When they searched it after the pursuit, detectives found a stolen check and a stolen credit card, he said.
Throughout the entire pursuit, no other vehicles were involved and no damage was reported, Briscoe said. The car even escaped with no visible damage.
Osborne is in the Clark County Detention Center on a $15,000 cash bond. He was charged with first-degree wanton endangerment, receipt of a stolen credit card, disregarding a stop sign, receiving stolen property under $10,000, first-degree fleeing or evading police and receiving stolen property under $500.

He will likely be arraigned in Clark District Court this afternoon.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

Supreme Court: What’s left of health law without mandate?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The heart of the Obama administration’s health care overhaul hanging in the balance, the Supreme Court is turning to whether the rest of the law can survive if the crucial individual insurance requirement is struck down.
The justices also will spend part of today, the last of three days of arguments over the health law, considering a challenge by 26 states to the expansion of the Medicaid program for low-income Americans, an important feature toward the overall goal of extending health insurance to an additional 30 million people.
The first two days of fast-paced and extended arguments have shown that the conservative justices have serious questions about Congress’ authority to require virtually every American to carry insurance or pay a penalty.
The outcome of the case will affect nearly all Americans and the ruling, expected in June, also could play a role in the presidential election campaign. Obama and congressional Democrats pushed for the law’s passage two years ago, while Republicans, including all the GOP presidential candidates, are strongly opposed.

But the topic the justices take up today only comes into play if they first find that the insurance mandate violates the Constitution.
If they do, then they will have to decide if the rest of the law stands or falls.
The states and the small business group opposing the law say the insurance requirement is central to the whole undertaking and should take the rest of the law down with it.
The administration argues that the only other provisions the court should kill in the event the mandate is stricken are insurance revisions that require insurers to cover people regardless of existing medical problems and limit how much they can charge in premiums based on a person’s age or health.
The federal appeals court in Atlanta that struck down the insurance requirement said the rest of the law can remain in place, a position that will be argued by a private lawyer appointed by the justices, H. Bartow Farr III.
On Tuesday, the conservative justices sharply and repeatedly questioned the validity of the insurance mandate.

If the government can force people to buy health insurance, justices wanted to know, can it require people to buy burial insurance? Cellphones? Broccoli?
Audio for Tuesday’s court argument can be found at: <http://apne.ws/Hft6z3>.
The court focused on whether the mandate for Americans to have insurance “is a step beyond what our cases allow,” in the words of Justice Anthony Kennedy.
“Purchase insurance in this case, something else in the next case,” Chief Justice John Roberts said.
But Kennedy, who is often the swing vote on cases that divide the justices along ideological lines, also said he recognized the magnitude of the nation’s health care problems and seemed to suggest they would require a comprehensive solution.
And Roberts also spoke about the uniqueness of health care, which almost everyone uses at some point.
“Everybody is in this market, so that makes it very different than the market for cars or the other hypotheticals that you came up with, and all they’re regulating is how you pay for it,” Roberts said, paraphrasing the government’s argument.

Kennedy and Roberts emerged as the apparent pivotal votes in the court’s decision.
The law envisions that insurers will be able to accommodate older and sicker people without facing financial ruin because the insurance requirement will provide insurance companies with more premiums from healthy people to cover the increased costs of care.
“If the government can do this, what else can it not do?” Justice Antonin Scalia asked. He and Justice Samuel Alito appeared likely to join with Justice Clarence Thomas, the only justice to ask no questions, to vote to strike down the key provision of the overhaul. The four Democratic appointees seemed ready to vote to uphold it.
Kennedy at one point said that allowing the government mandate would “change the relationship” between the government and U.S. citizens.

worked into the night Tuesday trying to work through disagreements on spending priorities in the bare-bones budget.
Leaders in the Democratic-controlled House and Republican-led Senate said they’re optimistic that they’ll reach an agreement on a two-year budget plan in the waning days of the legislative session.
Proposals would cut spending in several ways, including scrapping cost-of-living increases in the monthly pension checks of some 200,000 government retirees, eliminating proposed scholarships for Appalachian college students and skipping pay raises for teachers and government workers.
Negotiators worked until after 8 p.m. on Tuesday and scheduled talks to resume at 10 a.m. today.
One of the sticking points involved how revenue from the state’s tax on mined coal would be appropriated, including $6 million that House Democrats want to use to provide the Appalachian scholarships.
The negotiators talked at length Tuesday night about differences in proposed appropriations for indigent hospital care in Louisville.

The House proposes $41 million for the next two years while the Senate pledges $30 million but agrees to more if the city of Louisville contributes more. They’ve not yet reached agreement on that issue.
Senate Republican Leader Robert Stivers II of Manchester said he’s encouraged by the budget talks so far. He said negotiators are aiming to finish before 3 a.m. Thursday, the logistical deadline for printing the budget prior to a Friday evening floor vote.
“We’ve moving at a good rate,” Stivers said Tuesday afternoon.
Negotiators allowed cameras from the public television station KET in the conference room where they have been working. Reporters monitored the meeting from the KET feed.
In Kentucky, lawmakers long ago excluded themselves from provisions of the state’s open meeting law.
The tedious negotiations involved discussions of differences between appropriations and spending cuts proposed by House and Senate in a budget strained by economic woes.
Economic indicators show Kentucky slowly rebounding from the recession, but not fast enough to offset the additional budget cuts that lawmakers were wrangling over.

With only four days remaining in this year’s legislative session, negotiators haven’t yet tackled the state’s two-year, $3.5 billion Road Fund budget. Stumbo said he expects a budget deal soon between the House and Senate negotiators.
“It’s like two mules fighting over a turnip,” he said. “There’s not much there to fight over.”
The Senate proposal also cuts the amount of new debt in the budget to $391 million. That’s $161 million less than the House had authorized and $577 million less than the governor authorized. That remained a point of discussions on Monday.

Both sides wrangled over pre-authorization of $100 million in debt for the School Facilities Construction Commission during fiscal 2014-16.
The Senate wants to delete that language from the budget proposal.
The House insists on keeping it.
“It’s built schools all over the state,” Stumbo said. “We just hate to see it abandoned.”

Prejudice: The reality all teens face

CHICAGO — Two weeks ago when the Trayvon Martin slaying was just picking up steam on the Internet, my doorbell rang and I opened the door to two policewomen. There had been a series of petty crimes and acts of vandalism in my neighborhood and, as the officers questioned neighbors, they heard that they should investigate the two long-haired boys from down the street — mine — who are always out on their skateboards.

The two honor-roll students in question have cultivated a skater-boy look that often includes hoodies adorned with skulls or rock 'n' roll symbols (bought at the local Walmart), and long hair that, to their mother's dismay, always covers their faces.

Esther Cepeda

They had been with me at the time of the incident that the police came inquiring about, and so they were in the clear. But it was the perfect opportunity to warn them that, hoodie or not, simply being young, long-haired and male puts them at risk of being seen as an aggressor or a criminal by anyone who isn't familiar with their fine characters — that's just a fact.

"Every parent in America should be able to understand why it is absolutely imperative that we investigate every aspect of this and that everybody pulls together — federal, state and local — to figure out exactly how this tragedy happened," said President Obama last week, as he sympathized with Martin's parents.

Parents of every race and ethnicity in America should be reminding their teens that adults tend to be intimidated, annoyed or suspicious of them just because young people can be weird, sulking, overly excited or depressed — sometimes all within moments of each other.

At night, any teen might as well have a target on his — or her — back as an object of unease. But all parents should also expect that justice will be served if their child is wrestled to the ground and shot to death because of someone else's unfounded fears.

"This is not about a black-and-white thing. This is about a right-and-wrong thing," said Sybrina Fulton, Martin's mother, last week at a protest in New York City.

It is wrong that self-styled vigilantes with access to firearms pose a risk to all innocent people, not just young, minority or hoodie-wearing ones. And wrong that the aggressor in question wasn't even arrested when the incident occurred, sending the message that someone can get away with murdering another for simply looking suspicious.

But it is also wrong to ignore that Martin's death would have been equally senseless if he had been the same race as his attacker.

Analyzing the Etch a Sketch gaffe

ARBTUS, Md. — It is typical of Mitt Romney's luck that, on the morning after he all but secured the Republican presidential nomination, his campaign became embroiled in a controversy over a 1950s plastic toy.

Last Wednesday, hours after Romney's 12-point victory over Rick Santorum in the Illinois primary silenced most of the remaining doubters, senior adviser Eric Fehrnstrom went on CNN and gave new meaning to the term "game change."

Dana Milbank

Thirty feet away, Romney was shaking hands. Reporters inquired: Would he address the toy story? "We think gas prices are more important," spokesman Rick Gorka replied, examining the reporters' Etch a Sketches.

Santorum, who has taken Romney apart as if playing Operation, posed in his car with the rectangular device. His campaign tweeted out the photo with the caption "@RickSantorum studying up on @MittRomney policy positions."

"You take whatever he said and you can shake it up and it will be gone, and he's going to draw a whole new picture for the general election," Santorum crowed at a campaign stop in Louisiana.

Also campaigning in Louisiana, Newt Gingrich, who has turned the trail into a round of Twister, gave an Etch a Sketch to a young girl in the audience and told her, "You could now be a presidential candidate."

Will Romney ever end his string of debilitating gaffes? As the Magic 8

Ball says: Outlook not so good.

After the New Hampshire primary, Romney appeared to have it made in Candy Land. But Santorum and Gingrich felled his inevitability like dominoes, and — Sorry! — Romney finds himself in a coast-to-coast game of Connect Four with competitors who were not supposed to have been in his league but who are benefiting from voters' disenchantment with him.

There is some enthusiasm for the Republican front-runner. Outside the Romney event here, retiree Jim Wilson sat in his GMC truck decorated bumper to bumper with Romney paraphernalia and American flags. Wilson, who lives outside Charlottesville, Va., has been on the road since August, to each primary state except Colorado — and that's only because he wanted to make it to Kansas in time. "That's a bunch of horse apples," he said when asked about Romney's enthusiasm gap. "Look at this crowd," he said, between puffs on his pipe.

True enough. Two hundred supporters filled the hall, with at least that many outside. "This is really something," the candidate exulted to the overflow crowd in the parking lot. But holding that enthusiasm has been, for Romney, quite a Rubik's Cube. Inside, the candidate talked about health care, education, Iran, the economy — anything but children's toys.

Although it was not particularly warm in the hall, Romney ended by saying that the temperature had "reached 140 in here" — and retreated while glaring at reporters shouting Etch a Sketch questions.

Realizing that he could not shake the queries, Romney returned a few minutes later for a "short Q&A," known in the jargon as a "press avail." It lasted 90 seconds.

"The issues I'm running on will be exactly the same," he declared in response to an Etch a Sketch question. "I'm running as a conservative Republican. I was a conservative Republican governor."

So he was a conservative when he enacted Romneycare?

"Can you guarantee to Republican voters that you won't take more moderate positions?" CNN's Jim Acosta asked.

"I answered the question," Romney replied.

"An avail is more than one question, governor, if you don't mind my saying so," Acosta told him.

Romney grinned. "This wasn't an avail. It was a chance to respond to a question I didn't get a chance to respond to."

Sounds sketchy.

Letters to the editor

Help for injured, sick or orphaned wildlife

Dear Editor,

An opossum came into our garage on the night of Feb. 1 and stayed. On the second night, I realized this was an injured possum with a hole in his jaw.

By searching the Internet I found an email address and sent a plea for help. An answer to that email led me to call Broadbent Wildlife Sanctuary. Within two hours, a rescuer called to say he would be at our house in 30 minutes. The young man had driven two hours on Saturday from the Elizabethtown area to our home to rescue an injured opossum. He gently coaxed the opossum into a carrier and took him back to the wildlife sanctuary.

I made a few calls to see how the little fellow was doing. He was eating and thriving. The veterinarian thought he had been hit by a car but the prognosis was looking good.

I want to share information with others about this rescue organization. Broadbent Wildlife Sanctuary is a non-profit organization that rescues sick, injured or orphaned wildlife. It is a 3,500-acre sanctuary founded by Mary Ann Tobin, a former Kentucky legislator.

Please go to www.broadbentwildlife.org to find out much more information. You can view pictures of rescued wildlife, including birds (owls, eagles), exotic birds (rabbits, raccoons, squirrels, horses, beavers and deer).

The young man who rescued our opossum said they take any animal, including reptiles. The organization had recently worked with an animal shelter by taking a number of dogs that had been rescued from a Kentucky home. Broadbent has provided care for thousands of animals and has a full-time veterinarian on staff.

The mailing address is: Broadbent Wildlife Sanctuary, PO Box 387, Irvington, KY 40146, or call (270)547-4200 or (270)547-0010.

Please keep these phone numbers in a safe place because one day you may need help with an animal that may be abandoned, injured or orphaned; or you may want to make a tax-deductible donation to this non-profit organization.

Thank you to the Broadbent Wildlife Sanctuary staff for your wonderful ministry of help and protection of Kentucky's wildlife and abused or neglected animals.

Getting to know your feet

Keep lowest extremities in shape to boost overall health

With the Winchester Weigh Down in full swing, many of you are up and moving, and that means on your feet. Did you know the human foot contains 26 bones, 33 joints, 100 tendons, muscles and ligaments, 250,000 sweat glands and hundreds of thousands of miles of blood vessels, including arteries, veins and capillaries?

If you think about it, each foot carries half the weight of our body. In addition, an average day of walking exerts several hundred pounds of pressure on each foot. Learning to take care of our feet is important for our overall general health.

Good foot care includes some common day to day practices:

— Do not ignore foot pain. Foot pain is not normal. It can be a sign of foot illness or injury. Be sure to see your doctor for a proper diagnosis.

— Inspect your feet on a daily basis. Look at your feet for color, texture and temperature changes. Look for signs of excessive dryness, redness, paleness and any sores, cracks in the skin, scaly areas, and corns and calluses.

— Inspect your toenails while doing your foot inspection. Look for thick or discolored nails or any abnormal looking or painful toenails.

— Perform routine nail care. Trim you toenails straight across. Don't cut them too short.

— Make sure you wear properly fitting shoes. Buy new shoes late in the day because your feet will be at their largest.

— Replace worn out shoes on a regular basis.

— Match your shoes to your activity: walking shoes for walking, running shoes for running.

— Avoid walking barefoot. You could step on sharp objects and injure your feet.

— Avoid home remedies for foot ailments. Always consult a doctor for treatment.

— People with diabetes, poor circulation, high blood pressure, kidney disease or heart problems should see their doctor for foot and nail care because of the increased risk of injury and infection.

Be sure to follow the list of classes with the Winchester Weigh Down on the web at www.winchesterweighdown.com. Also, view our Taste of the Month recipe featuring broccoli. This weeks' recipe is Broccoli and Beef Stir-fry. You can find this recipe and more at

Honor guard: Vets pay respect, time after time

By Kayleigh Zyskowski
The State Journal

FRANKFORT (AP) — When the phone rings at the Frankfort Veterans of Foreign Wars Post on Second Street, 85-year-old Charlie Mauer answers it.

On the other end is not a question about the day's soups or the next bingo night, but a request for the VFW Post 4075 Honor Guard to pay final respects to a fellow veteran.

It's a call Mauer, Honor Guard commander, has been answering for years, and he's honored to take it.

K.B. Johns, Ralph Spooner, Bill Hampton and Mauer — the only living original member — founded the first VFW Post 4075 Color Guard in the early 1950s.

Within the next decade they were able to support a full Honor Guard, which takes at least 11 members: two flag folders, seven rifle-men, one bugler and one leader.

Four of the current members are World War II veterans, and the rest served in Vietnam, Korea, Desert Storm and Operation Iraqi Freedom. They are from different generations, but the men say they share the same respect for each other.

"We've got a good bunch of guys," Mauer said.

Mauer, a World War II veteran, said serving the community and paying tribute to

AP photo/The State Journal, Tricia Spaulding
Members of the VFW KY Post 4075 Honor Guard stand before the start of a funeral at Frankfort Cemetery. The honor guard has four World War II veterans currently serving in the guard.

Frankfort veterans is something he's glad to do. And because he grew up in Frankfort, he knows many of those who've died, which makes the job more important to him.

Several days after the call comes in, Mauer arrives at the post ready to greet the other members and prepare the equipment.

"We don't get paid," said World War II veteran Jim Wolcott, "other than a free lunch and a beer."

The men arrive wearing dark blue uniforms decorated with gold cords, white gloves and polished black shoes.

They shuffle into the game room of the VFW where the rifles are stored in a locked cabinet.

After they are prepared to leave for the funeral service, the group stands in the doorway teasing each other about their weight and asking the kitchen crew what's for lunch.

There's no need for practice or rehearsal; each man knows his role because the group has done it so often.

The group has attended as many as three funerals in one day, Mauer said, but the number is usually several per month. Over the years, they have provided services for hundreds of funerals.

The men have braved every kind of weather for funerals, and this morning is chilly and rainy. Luckily, they've heard the sky will clear before the service starts.

Cattlemen's Foundation, others assist in storm ravaged counties

FRANKFORT — In the wake of the terrible storms that ravaged farms across the Commonwealth, Agriculture Commissioner James Comer commended the efforts of the Kentucky Cattlemen's Foundation for raising funds and assistance from farm supply companies for disaster relief efforts.

In just one day, the foundation raised more than $12,000 from agriculture companies and individual farmers. This money was used to purchase fencing and other farm materials desperately needed to rebuild cattle farms affected by the March 3 tornadoes. In response to the foundation's call for help, Tarter Farm and Ranch Equipment in Casey County drastically reduced its prices and delivered the much-needed materials to the affected areas. The Blue Grass Livestock Marketing Group also contributed $5,000 to the foundation's efforts.

"I'm so proud of the agriculture community for immediately stepping up to help our farm families in need," Commissioner Comer said. "I encourage other companies to follow the lead of Tarter Farm and Ranch Equipment and Blue Grass Livestock Marketing Group and donate money, materials, and manpower during this crisis."

Tarter Farm and Ranch Equipment delivered disaster-relief materials to Holbrook Veterinary Clinic in West Liberty. Department of Agriculture

Deputy Commissioner Bruce Harper and Kentucky Cattlemen's Association Executive Vice President Dave Maples were also on hand to offer assistance.

"I'm so grateful to these agriculture leaders for lending a hand in my community," Senate Majority Floor Leader Robert Stivers of Manchester, said. "But there is much more to do. It's my hope that within the following weeks, eastern Kentucky's farmers will have the supplies they need to rebuild and return to normal operations."

"West Liberty farmers are grateful for the contributions to assist with securing fences and farms throughout our communities," said Rep. John Will Stacy of West Liberty.

Weisenbergers Mill, Scott Co. landmark for past 150 years

Chris Aldridge
Kentucky Proud
Connection

MIDWAY — Six generations of Weisenbergers have been milling wheat and corn on the banks of South Elkhorn Creek near Midway, for 150 years.

"Weisenberger Mill is a true example of the American dream," Phil Weisenberger said.

The Weisenberger success story began in 1848, when young August Weisenberger left his home in Baden, Germany, and boarded a ship to the fledgling United States of America.

"He was only 21 years old, so that was a pretty bold move," Ernest "Mac" Weisenberger, current caretaker of the family business, said.

August's travels took him to Pittsburgh. He took a riverboat down the Ohio, stopping for a time at Cincinnati and Louisville. He sailed as far west as St. Louis before retracing his route back up the Ohio to the falls at Louisville.

August, who had some millwright experience in his native Germany, settled in Woodford County and started milling near Spring Station in 1862. Twenty years later, he purchased a mill at the current site in southern Scott County.

Built in the early 19th century, the mill was rebuilt in 1913 by August's son, Philip, using rock from the original mill. Mac's grandfather, August II, kept the business going when his father died in 1936. Mac's father, Philip II, took the reins in 1955.

Philip II developed specialty products before his death in 2008 that have enabled Weisenberger Mill to continue to prosper. In its early days, Weisenberger's primary products were soft wheat flour and white cornmeal. The mill now churns out more than 70 products.

A tour of Weisenberger's mill is like a trip into the past. From a one-lane girder bridge over Elkhorn Creek to the climb up two flights of narrow stairs lightly dusted in flour, people can barely carry on a conversation above the noisy churning and sifting of its century-old, cast-iron machinery.

"If something breaks, we can't go to a store and buy a part," said Philip III, Mac's son and heir apparent to the business. "We either have to make a new part or find one off an old machine."

The mill is partially run by two water-powered turbines, which can produce 150 100-pound bags of flour in 24 hours.

Weisenberger is one of very few small mills left. Mac said there were 5,000 mills in the U.S. in 1950, but that number has dwindled to fewer than 700 currently, according to a list maintained by Manta.com.

Weisenberger Mill is run by four employees.

Though the mill's product line has expanded, Mac told the Midway Messenger website that it's important to him, as it was to his forefathers, to keep the basic production process the same as it's always been.

"We mill grain the same way since we started," he said to the Midway Messenger. "We put an emphasis on quality, not quantity."

Where many other businesses have come and gone, Weisenberger Mill has survived and thrived. They are a great example for other small Kentucky Proud businesses to follow.

Blue Grass Army Depot Wounded Warrior Turkey Hunt, April 31

The Blue Grass Army Depot, located between Richmond and Berea, is hosting its first Wounded Warrior Turkey Hunt March 29 through April 1.

Wounded Warriors from Fort Campbell and Fort Knox have been invited to attend to practice and rebuild their hunting skills and to participate in the turkey hunt, March 31, from sunrise to 3 p.m., according to depot officials.

"Blue Grass Army Depot has a healthy population of wild turkeys and is proud to offer this opportunity to our wounded warriors," BGAD land manager Nathan White said.

Volunteers from the Madison County chapter of the National Wild Turkey Federation will serve as turkey callers for the event.

The soldiers will be able to get in some shotgun practice prior to the turkey shoot from 10:30 a.m. to noon Friday, March 30 at Blue Grass Army Depot's newly renovated Himes Shooting Range.

The depot's Family Moral Welfare and Recreation (FMWR) will provide food to the Wounded Warriors free of charge. Volunteers and guests can purchase meals from FMWR throughout the weekend.

Blue Grass Army Depot is located at 431 Battlefield Memorial Highway, south of Richmond.

Lorax statue stolen from Seuss' widow

SAN DIEGO (AP) — They took the Lorax, made of bronze, the thieves they came, and now he's gone. A 2-foot statue of Dr. Seuss's the Lorax was stolen from the San Diego backyard garden of the 90-year-old widow of the beloved author whose real name was Theodore Geisel.

Audrey Geisel noticed the statue and its tree-stump base were missing from the garden and were likely stolen over the weekend.

Property manager Carl Romero told U-T San Diego on Tuesday that he noticed footprints indicating the thieves had dragged the 300-pound statue to an access road and lifted it over a fence.

He had seen the statue Saturday afternoon and Geisel noticed it was missing Monday morning.

Audrey Geisel's daughter Lark Grey Dimond-Cate cast two of the sculptures. One was the lone Seuss character to reside on the family's property overlooking the Pacific Ocean in La Jolla. The other sits at the Dr. Seuss National Memorial in the author's hometown, Springfield, Mass. Theodore Geisel died in 1991 at age 87.

"I want very badly to get our little Lorax back home where he belongs," Dimond-Cates said. "Wherever he is, he's scared, lonely and hungry. He's not just a hunk of metal to us. He was a family pet."

The Lorax has enjoyed special notoriety because of the recently released film version of Dr. Seuss's 1971 environmental fable, in which the mustachioed main character speaks out for the Truffula trees against corporate greed, personified by the evil Once-ler.

Dimond-Cates said she actually hopes the Lorax was stolen because of his new-found fame. Otherwise it could mean he was stolen for the bronze.

"I hope he hasn't been taken across the border into Tijuana for scrap," she said. "Worst-case scenario, I'll get the foundry to create another one, but he won't be the same."

Martin's parents speak before Congressional panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a packed forum on Capitol Hill on Tuesday, the parents of Trayvon Martin found support among members of Congress who turned the death of their 17-year-old's son into a rallying cry against racial profiling.

Martin's parents spoke briefly before a Democrats-only congressional panel as cameras clicked noisily in front of them. Many in the crowd, which filled the seats and lined the walls, strained to catch a glimpse of the parents whose son was shot and killed Feb. 26 in a Sanford, Fla. gated community.

"Trayvon was our son, but Trayvon is your son," Sybriana Fulton, Martin's mother, told the panel. "A lot of people can relate to our situation and it breaks their heart like it breaks our heart."

Martin's father, Tracy Martin, thanked "everyone who is holding the legacy of Trayvon."

"Trayvon is sadly missed and we will continue to fight for justice for him," said Tracy Martin, who wore a weary look.

During the two-hour forum, the lawmakers and witnesses openly criticized the police investigation of the shooting and the failure of police to arrest the admitted shooter, George Zimmerman. Those attending the hearing applauded the couple when Deborah Ramirez, a law professor at Northeastern University School of Law in Boston, praised the parents' "dignity and grace in the face of this tragedy" and said they were an "inspiration to all."

Zimmerman, 28, has said he acted in self-defense. Federal and state officials are investigating.

"It is very important that we have independent eyes on this situation," said Rep. Corrine Brown, a Democrat whose district includes Sanford. "I am hoping we take this as a teachable moment. I am looking forward to how the Justice Department handles their independent investigation."

At a news conference after the forum, Martin and Fulton renewed their calls for justice in their son's death. When asked whether he thought his son's death was a hate crime, Martin said: "Yes, I believe he was racially profiled." The family's attorney, Benjamin Crump, said racial profiling also was a factor in the way the police conducted their investigation.

Several members of Congress have called for the case to be investigated as a hate crime. Another attorney for the Martin family, Daryl D. Parks, has said that statements from Department of Justice officials in a meeting with Martin's parents make clear that getting hate crime charges is going to be a challenge.

Martin was black. Zimmerman's father is white and his mother is Hispanic.

Tuesday's session was not an official House Judiciary hearing, so no votes or formal action could occur. The committee's ranking Democrat, Rep. John Conyers of Michigan, said the meeting was intended to be a discussion of racial profiling, hate crime laws and Florida's Stand Your Ground law, which eliminated a person's duty to retreat when threatened with serious bodily harm or death.

Colo. wildfire partially contained

CONIFER, Colo. (AP) — Firefighters were hoping to start containing at least part of a mountain wildfire Wednesday that forced hundreds of residents to flee, damaged 28 homes and may have caused the deaths of two people.

Strong gusts and erratic fire behavior forced crews to focus largely on protecting homes overnight instead of attacking the fire that broke out Monday, but more resources have been arriving.

The blaze is among the top in the nation for the priority to get firefighting resources, fire officials said late Tuesday.

Some 450 firefighters from Colorado, Idaho, Nevada and Utah were sent to assist 250 firefighters on the ground. Weather permitting, four aircraft were scheduled to drop retardant Wednesday on the 7-square-mile blaze that resulted in mandatory evacuations of 900 homes south of the commuter town of Conifer, about 25 miles southwest of downtown Denver.

Residents of 6,500 more homes were warned Tuesday to be ready to leave.

Opening lead — king of spades.

Part of the skill of good declarer play consists of inducing your opponents to make errors. The more often a declarer gives the opposition a chance to make an error, the more often will the desired result be attained.

Consider this deal where South is declarer at six hearts. The contract cannot be made against best defense, yet there is a real possibility to make the slam if declarer sets the stage properly.

Let's say you're South and win West's king-of-spades lead with the ace, East playing the five. You draw three rounds of trumps and then cash the A-K-Q of diamonds and A-K of clubs, ending in your hand. At this point you lead a low spade toward dummy's 9-4, and West, who holds the Q-10 of spades, must decide which of them to play.

If he makes the normal play of the ten, you make the slam! East must win with the jack, and since his only remaining cards are the Q-10-7 of clubs, he must lead one of them. This allows you to discard a spade from one hand while you ruff in the other, and the slam is home.

If West is smart enough to play his queen when you lead the spade toward dummy, he defeats you, but it has cost you nothing in the process to present him with an opportunity to make an error.

Actually, West has a very difficult decision to make when you lead the spade. From his point of view, he should play the ten if he thinks you started with the J-6-3, and the queen if he thinks you started with 8-6-3. West might guess right, or he might guess wrong, but at least he should be given the chance to go astray. Lots of points — 1,530 of them — ride on his decision.

Tomorrow: A crucial play.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, March 28, 2012

This year, especially after May, you will feel as if your life has taken a turn for the better. Communication flows. You might purchase a new car or computer. You have more energy and often can be found socializing. Do not hesitate to ask questions if you are confused. You can work from clarity, but not from confusion. If you are single, you meet people with ease; however, it might take time for the apple of your eye to understand you. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy more time together. Chat over a meal or take a walk together — just be together. GEMINI always is fun!

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ You have a lot to discuss. Allow adequate time for other responsibilities, errands or whatever dominates your schedule. A talk could involve someone playing devil's advocate. Appreciate that this person cares enough to function in this manner. Tonight: Visit with others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★ Curb a need to have things go your way. You have spirit and endurance, and you probably could wage an endless battle. Do you want to focus on that type of interaction? Back off, and give some thought to what you are doing. Take stock of your finances before you go out. Tonight: Your treat.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ You are all smiles and full of energy. Do not allow someone to intimidate you. Claim your power, but avoid walking on others — for your sake and theirs; newfound respect will develop as a result. Let feelings flow. Tonight: If you could have it all, what would you choose? Let that be your guide.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You might feel strongly about certain matters, but this is not the time to act on them. Rethink, brainstorm and stay on top of others' demands. Know that you soon will be on top of your game. Understand what is needed. Think through a decision rather than give in to impulsiveness. Tonight: Busy, aren't we?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Zero in on a situation involving key people in your life. It could involve a decision or a discussion. At this point, consider yourself lucky if everyone is on the same page. Do not push your opinions on others. Curb spending. Tonight: Where the action is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ You naturally assume the lead. You could be surprised by what is heading down your path. Give someone the respect he or she deserves, but understand that showing respect does not mean you have to agree with this person. Tonight: A must appearance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ You do a good juggling act. You could have a difficult time, as others dump more errands, requests and responsibilities on you. Look beyond the obvious when dealing with others. Kick back, and note what is not being said. A conversation holds plenty of potential. Jump on someone's suggestion. Tonight: Reach out to a friend or loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ You might want to avoid an associate's or partner's feedback. Stop your automatic response, and attempt to get past your resistance. This person understands you and often has great suggestions. Together you are a strong team. Tonight: Carrying the theme of teamwork into the night.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ You might want to do more listening. Others demonstrate unusual capacities. They, too, have great ideas. You might find it interesting to be more passive. When you detach, you can gain a better sense of those close to you. Tonight: Go along with another's plans.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ You could be exhausted by your efforts to make a dream a reality. Know that you will need to handle an overwhelming amount of requests, plus whatever is already on your plate. Do more listening. Tonight: Squeeze in a stress-buster.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Your creativity expands the more you use it. Others appreciate the unusual and different slant you put on a personal matter. A child could demand more attention. You find time spent with a loved one rewarding. Tonight: Let the rascal within you romp.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★ Stay centered, and know what is going on. You could be taken back by someone's neediness. You cannot change this person, but if you feel too engaged, step back a little. He or she might be a bit thrown off. Make adjustments to this person as necessary. Tonight: Happily head home.

Pain clinic operator found guilty of conspiracy

LEXINGTON (AP) — A federal jury on Tuesday found a Louisiana businessman and the pain clinics he ran in Ohio and Pennsylvania guilty of conspiring to distribute oxycodone and methadone in eastern Kentucky and to launder the sales profits.

After nearly four weeks of trial, jurors in Lexington returned the verdict in the case of 46-year-old Michael D. Leman and Urgent Care Services clinics in Cincinnati and Philadelphia.

A grand jury charged that

Leman conspired with several of his employees to prescribe methadone and oxycodone to bogus patients who were working with drug dealers to distribute them in eastern Kentucky. Jurors on Tuesday also ordered Leman to forfeit $825,000 as the profits of the scheme.

U.S. District Judge Gregory Van Tatenhove set Leman's sentencing for Aug. 2 in Lexington.

Authorities say runners would travel five to 16 hours from Kentucky to clinics in Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Ohio to pick up prescriptions for drugs that would be distributed in areas such as Pike and Floyd counties in Kentucky, from 2004 through 2008. The U.S. Attorney's Office in Lexington said the case marks its first prosecution of a pain clinic owner.

The case probed how federal investigators believe an illegal pain pill distribution network functioned in Kentucky's Appalachian region, where prescription drug use is rampant.

The Winchester Christian Academy baseball team went 1-1 in a tournament at Morehead recently. Christian defeated Teays Valley Christian from Hurricane, West Virginia, 15-4. Magic, group buy Dodgers

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Lakers Hall of Famer Magic Johnson and longtime baseball executive Stan Kasten were part of a group that agreed to buy the Los Angeles Dodgers from Frank McCourt for a record $2 billion. The price would shatter the mark for a sports franchise, Stephen Ross paid $1.1 billion for the NFL's Miami Dolphins in 2009, and in England In Malcolm Glazer and his family took over the Manchester United soccer club in 2005 in a deal then valued at $1.47 billion. Mark Walter, chief executive officer of the financial services firm Guggenheim Partners, would become the controlling owner. Kasten likely would be the team's top day-to-day executive. The deal, revealed about five hours after Major League Baseball owners approved three finalists for an intended auction, is one of several steps toward a sale of the team by the end of April. It is subject to approval in federal bankruptcy court.

Final Four: Pain a gain for Wildcats

Leaving Houston last year wasn't an easy feeling. Just ask Darius Miller. The Kentucky senior hasn't forgotten what it felt like following a 56-55 loss to eventual national champion Connecticut in last year's national semifinals. The narrow setback was hard to swallow, especially considering the Wildcats used a four seed as motivation during a successful march through the NCAA Tournament. The disappointment quickly turned into determination, which included emotional victories over top-seeded Ohio State and North Carolina in the East Region bracket. The stack of four victories at the time included a close call against Princeton and a pay-back win over West Virginia, the team that ousted Kentucky in the East region finals the previous season. Although Kentucky had reached the Final Four for the first time since 1998, the ending wasn't the one Miller expected. "We were really upset after that game," he said. "We felt like we played a really good game (and) really fought hard. All of that amount of work that we put in that whole year and we lost like that. (We) didn't end the season (with) a win (and) it really hurt us." If you ask John Calipari about last year's experience, he admits the team "dropped the ball" from top to bottom. "We all dropped it, obviously preparation was bad, there was something that was not right," he said. "I felt bad for them, I wasn't mad, I was so proud of what they were able to do with that season I can't even begin to tell you. I kept saying all along, I like my team, I like my team, I know we lost some but this year let me say this, I really like my team." Kentucky lost most of the nucleus to last year's squad, including point guard Brandon Knight, but Terrence Jones and Lamb opted against entering the NBA Draft and decided to take at least one more shot at

Three games into his tenure as baseball coach at George Rogers Clark High School, Matt Ginter is still looking for his first win. Despite scoring a season-high three runs, the Cardinals came up short in a 4-3 loss to Woodford County Tuesday at Cardinal Field. Ginter, a former Major League pitcher and standout at the school, is in his first season at Clark. The Cardinals (0-3) collected seven hits and committed just one error against the Yellowjackets, who raced out to a 3-0 lead, before Clark scored twice in the bottom of the fourth inning to draw closer to the guests. Clark got a solid effort at the plate from Brent Stoneking, Dustin Bonner and Pokey Harris. The three players collected two hits apiece, with Stoneking lacing a double. Logan McQuerry and Jordan Williams each had one hit for the hosts. McQuerry drove in a pair of runs, while Williams and Stoneking each recorded an RBI. Clark pitcher Derek McKenzie went the distance. McKenzie, a right-hander, scattered 11 hits and gave up four runs, all of which were earned. McKenzie collected a pair of strikeouts and walked just two batters in seven innings. Harris, a senior, scored two of Clark's runs in the contest. Clark left seven runners on base, while Woodford County stranded nine. Clark tacked on a run in the seventh inning for the final margin. In the junior varsity game, Clark dropped a 5-1 loss to the Yellowjackets. Clark scored its only run in the second inning and finished with six hits. Taylor Evans, Mason Hisle, Luke Sharrock, Zack Roe, Skylar True and Malik Warner each had a hit for the Cards. Mason Hatton went the first three innings, fanned five batters and walked two, while Zack Roe whiffed four hitters and issued just one walk.

ends Cats'
season

KINGSTON, R.I. (AP) — The chalkboard in the UConn locker room after the Huskies' victory over Kentucky had two words written across it: Final Four. Even though that destination is expected every year for Geno Auriemma's teams, this season felt different. Before it started, Auriemma figured his team wouldn't be good enough to make it to the Final Four. But a funny thing happened along the way: His starless team jelled and now UConn is back in the national semifinals for a fifth straight season. "We like to go to the Final Four every year," Auriemma said. "I think we're also realistic, some years it's going to be easier than others. Expectations are always there, regardless of the probability. This year was less than other years. Makes it more worthwhile. Last year we went as a team led by Maya Moore. This year there isn't any of that. The University of Connecticut is going to the Final Four and I think that's pretty cool once in a while." Tiffany Hayes scored 22 points and top-seed Connecticut beat Kentucky 80-65 Tuesday night in the Kingston regional final. "We're not a team with superstars, we didn't have any preseason All-Americans, so no one really expected us to be as dominant as we have been this year," said UConn guard Bria Hartley. Kaleena Mosqueda-Lewis added 18 for UConn (33-4), which will play Notre Dame on Sunday in Denver. Hayes, who was selected most outstanding player of the regional, has been to a Final Four in all four of her seasons. Getting there this time was special to the senior. "It's even sweeter because this is a team effort, it wasn't one or two people getting us there," she said. "We all had our part in it. Everyone had their way of helping us get there. Glad to be back for the fourth time." The Huskies matched their own school mark of five straight trips to the national semifinals set from 2000-04. LSU and Stanford also have accomplished the feat. Unlike their previous four trips to the regional finals, which were quick blowouts, the Huskies had to work to pull away from the Wildcats. UConn led 48-47 early in the second half before turning up its defense and taking command with a 21-5 spurt. Hayes, the lone senior on the

Coaches cash in on bonuses

The Associated Press

Ohio State coach Thad Matta has already cashed in on the Buckeyes' trip to the Final Four. So have the rest of the coaches whose teams are headed to New Orleans. Matta has racked up $100,000 in incentives tied to his team's performance in the Big Ten and NCAA tournament this season. And that doesn't include the one-year extension that was triggered when the Buckeyes beat Michigan State for a share of the conference regular-season title. Kansas coach Bill Self, whose team plays Ohio State on Saturday night, and John Calipari of Kentucky and Rick Pitino of Louisville are already racking up similar bonus packages, according to a review of their contracts by The Associated Press. "It's a heavyweight group, no question about that," Self said Tuesday, referring to the quartet of coaches and their schools. They're getting paid like heavyweights, too. Self signed a contract extension that runs from April 2008 through the 2017-18 season and guarantees an annual salary of $2.5 million. But it's the bonus provisions that could turn an already princely sum into a greater financial windfall. By winning the school's eighth consecutive Big 12 title during the regular season, Self earned a $50,000 performance bonus. And when his team pulled away late to beat North Carolina in the winning an elusive title. The returnees, along with the arrival of newcomers Anthony Davis, Michael Kidd-Gilchrist, Kyle Wiltjer and Marquis Teague, clicked with each other and take an impressive 36-2 record into Saturday's showdown against the University of Louisville at the Superdome in New Orleans, La.

The balance has produced a healthy harmony on and off the court and has Jones smiling heading into the Big Easy.

"It feels great," Jones said after the Wildcats defeated Baylor 82-70 to win the South Region. "Just working hard all year with this group and just us coming together to become a family, and just celebrating getting this far is real good."

Jones, Lamb and Miller know what it's like to step on the main stage in the Big Dance and Davis will get his first opportunity this weekend. He's looking forward to sharing the spotlight with Ohio State, Kansas and Louisville.

"It's a great feeling to be a part of something special and go to the Final Four," he said. "It's everyone's college dream."

That dream, however, can end in a nightmare, but sometimes, experience counts. Last year's ending in the Lone Star state may have been painful at the time, but left the returning players with an empty feeling.

"I think that was kind of motivation for us this year, too," Miller said. "We know how it feels to lose and we don't want to feel that way again."

Lamb wants to finish last year's unfinished task.

"We just want to win it all this year," he said.

team, was the catalyst, scoring seven points during the run. She got it started with a lay-in. Then the Huskies started a parade to the free throw line, with whistle after whistle. The Huskies converted 12 free throws during the game-changing run.

While the Huskies were scoring points, their vaunted defense was stymieing the Wildcats, who torched UConn for 39 points before the break, the most the Huskies have allowed in the first half this season.

The Wildcats found it much tougher to score in the second half. During UConn's burst, Kentucky could only get two field goals over a span of 9 minutes.

Mosqueda-Lewis' 3-pointer with 7:26 left capped UConn's burst and made it 69-52.

Kentucky (28-7) could get no closer than 15 the rest of the way.

Samarie Walker scored 14 to lead the Wildcats.

It's been a strange season for UConn. Despite running through the early part of the schedule, Auriemma knew it was just a matter of time before the team's shortcomings were exposed. Losses to Baylor and Notre Dame on the road were understandable, but it wasn't until the end of February that UConn really came to a crossroads.

The Associated Press

Kentucky center Samarie Walker is patted on the shoulder by an assistant coach as she leaves the court with less than two minutes remaining in an 80-65 loss to Connecticut Tuesday night.

The Huskies lost to St. John's at home on senior night, snapping a 99-game home winning streak. Nine days later the Huskies fell to Notre Dame. Those two defeats got the Huskies re-focused and they've been unstoppable since. The Huskies cruised to the Big East tournament championship and rolled through their first three NCAA tournament games.

Now the Huskies are back in the Final Four for the 13th time in the last 18 years.

The Kentucky women were trying to join the school's men's team in the Final Four. It would have been the eighth time that a school had both programs in the national semifinals. Connecticut has done it three times, including last season. The Huskies are still the only school to win both the men's and women's championship in the same season, in 2004.

It's the second time in three seasons that the Wildcats had reached the regional finals. They lost to Oklahoma two seasons ago.

"It's hard to get to where we got to tonight and they've been here so many times, it's difficult," Kentucky coach Matthew Mitchell said. "We need to stay at it and keep showing up and one

Midwest Regional finals Sunday, Self guaranteed himself another $100,000.

If the Jayhawks can get by Ohio State, a team they've beat once already this season, and then win their second national championship in five years, Self will take another $200,000 to the bank.

The potential of $350,000 in incentives pales in comparison though to what could await Calipari.

Despite making $3.8 million — an annual guaranteed package that gets a $1 million retention bump starting next season — officials at Kentucky still managed to sweeten the pot by factoring in hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of bonuses tied to on-court success.

Already, Calipari has cashed in for winning the Southeastern Conference regular-season and tournament titles, worth $50,000 each. He earned $100,000 each for making the regional semifinals and finals, and $150,000 for beating Baylor and taking the Wildcats back to the Final Four.

Winning the basketball-mad school's eighth NCAA tournament title would net another $350,000.

Incidentally, the bonus tied to Kentucky's academic progress rate? A mere $50,000.

"What John Calipari has done on and off the court ... to reunite and rejuvenate this fan base has been magical," Kentucky athletic director Mitch Barnhart said last June, which he announced that Calipari's contract had been restructured.

Calipari's counterpart in the Bluegrass State is making out well, too.

Pitino is making $3 million this season and next season under an extension that took effect in July 2010, and that includes a bump in annual compensation to $3.9 million starting in 2013.

He also receives cumulative bonuses for on-court success: $50,000 for winning the Big East tournament title, another $50,000 for making the regional semifinals and finals, and $75,000 when the Cardinals knocked off Florida to book their trip to the Superdome.

Pitino will cash another $150,000 check if Louisville cuts down the nets Monday night.

Then there is Matta, whose total day we'll punch through."

Kentucky is headed in the right direction. The Wildcats won their first regular-season SEC championship since 1982 and tied the school record for victories in a season.

"We had an incredible season," Walker said. "It's disappointing but we have a really good group coming back and we will be really good again."

Mitchell will have most of his team back next season. The Wildcats' coach put the Denver Final Four logo in front of the locker room before the year started as motivation for his squad. Now they can look toward to next season and making it to New Orleans.

"We'll keep knocking on the door and hopefully one day we'll get to the Final Four," Mitchell said. "Four or five years ago when these kids thought of coming to Kentucky, they weren't thinking about winning an SEC championship. I'm really proud of them, and what they've accomplished."

UConn raced out to a 9-0 lead and looked poised for another blowout. A quick timeout by Mitchell settled his team down and the Wildcats rallied to close within 23-21 on two free throws by Bria Goss. A jumper by Stefanie Dolson and 3-pointer by Hayes gave the Huskies a 28-21 advantage with 8:19 left.

Kentucky was unfazed. The Wildcats, who were constantly subbing fresh players, then went on a 12-2 run over the next three minutes as fouls started piling up on the Huskies.

package this season — base salary, media responsibilities, deferred compensation, retention bonuses, retirement and endorsements — totals $2,735,000.

The Ohio State coach already has accrued $20,000 for a Big Ten co-championship and $40,000 for making the NCAA tournament. He earned another $20,000 for making the regional finals and $20,000 more when the Buckeyes beat top-seeded Syracuse for a spot in the Final Four.

That's a total of $100,000 in bonuses so far, and Matta would double it if the Buckeyes can win two more games and capture the school's first national title since 1960.

That's the cost of doing business in major college athletics.
